ABSTRACT

The novel Great Expectations by Charles Dickens, a Victorian novelist, is the subject of this study. Moral values are the focus of this research. The purpose of this research is to determine out what kinds of moral values was present in the novel and what are the effects of the philosophical moral picture contained in the novel from the perspective of people's lives. A qualitative descriptive method Creswell (2014) was used by the researchers. To collect the data researcher using the data collection method, namely by taking the data source from the novel Great Expectation reading it, and making a list of moral principles in the novel. The researcher also uses a moral philosophy approach where the moral in the approach refers to good and bad things. Good moral values are things that must be followed because these values can build a person's attitude for the better and are considered positive. While bad moral values are things that must be avoided because they are considered to make a person mentally down and his attitude refers to negative things. It can be concluded that philosophical morals are moral values that become a benchmark for the goodness or badness of a person's actions that must be followed and must be avoided. The author also hopes that this research will provide readers for useful information, especially in terms of moral value.

Key words: moral philosophi, moral value, novel.
