CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

5.1 Conclusion

This study looked into the notion of presupposition. The film adaptation of To Kill a Mockingbird served as the primary source of data for this study. The characters in the film spoke such lines as part of the data analysis they were performing. In accordance with the findings, the purpose of this research is to identify the types and the triggers of presupposition.

In the movie, "To Kill a Mockingbird," structural presupposition was the most frequently used expression. It was followed by the most frequent temporal clause. It indicated that the characters in the film were more concerned with making conclusions from the utterance itself. The use of temporal clauses is common in everyday speech. People generate utterances in order to express their thoughts, and the utterance can be extracted from the sentence by identifying certain words.

5.2 Recommendations

In communication, presuppositions are an extremely important factor. It is a component of language that can be used in several kinds of expressions. In order to be successful in social interactions, it is essential to comprehend and utilize presupposition. The purpose of the study is to make it clear to readers, as well as potential future researchers who may continue with this research, that presuppositions should not only be understood but also applied. When someone are able to presuppose someone else's statement by accurately identifying the trigger, it is possible for them to acknowledge so much information that may not be said in the utterance.

Subsequently, it is helpful for students who are concerned with their English studies to receive information in terms of pragmatics, namely presupposition. It is expected of readers that they will examine the presupposition in order to make assumptions and acquire additional detail knowledge.
