

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

In Psychoanalysis theory of personality by Sigmund Freud, id is the only one of personality structure which is presented at birth. It is the basic human structure of human personality. So, to react based on the id, human can do anything by their own id since just birth. Besides, the other structure need long time to grow and learn the condition of society and human relationship. An infant can react to even him or her birth by his mother several minutes ago. But, the infant reacts to the desire toward the mother based on pleasure principle. The focus of the infant is to escape from the uncomfortable condition if the desire does not fulfill well. So, it is the condition of Frankenstein's monster who insists the creator (mother) to make second creature to him in order to be friend of the monster which is then refusing by Victor because he aware that first creature have killed his beloved brother. The basic problem that makes the monster doing the destruction is because of refusing of the people in society to suppose Frankenstein's monster as the part of them which then drive the id of the monster to Victor make the second creature as his friend besides the desire to be alive as human being commonly.

From this condition, the researcher concludes that even the monster adult physically but the reality of that condition is he just gave life from his creator, Victor Frankenstein. So, the condition of psychology of the monster has not growth normally but he can do everything by his adult body. Because the monster does not know which the right and wrong is by the society life. He just wanted to be received by society but society refuse him strongly because of the ugly condition of the monster which is shaped the outer body by Victor Frankenstein from several part of the sewed death body. Then, he wants another creature from Victor Frankenstein but Victor refuse it strongly. The monster, become angry and make some destruction and murder. So, the id of Frankenstein's monster is dominant because he conducts the problems with destruction and murdering to follow the instinct and psychic energy which are unconscious and follow the pleasure principle to avoid pain.

5.2 Suggestion

This research has finally come to its conclusion, and it has provided the research with a lot of experience related to how a good study should carry out, especially a research concerning id dominance in human personality using Psychological approach. Through this research, new finding concerning in id dominance of Frankenstein's monster personality with it relation to Sigmund Freud's Theory of Personality have been provided, but due the limited time and resources, the researcher could not present more in deeper discussion. Thus, further study concerning this research is required to achieve such a goal. Even though the research itself, the researcher discovered that there were a lot of problem related in psychology approach which can be analyzed by future researchers. With such topics for further studies and this research as its reference, future researchers may discover more interesting phenomenon and new interesting findings related to “Frankenstein” novel and Mary Shelley as its author.
