

CHAPTER V CONCLUSION

In the end of this research of this research, the researcher needs to conclude the result of the research. Therefore, this chapter states about the conclusion and suggestion. The conclusion draws about the result of the research which being the new finding, while the suggestion advise for the reader and all the people who consider about literary research.

5.1. Conclusion

Based on the research finding and discussion, some conclusion can be related to the research quotation and object of the problem. After doing the analysis about the unusual transformation in Alice in Wonderland by Lewis Carroll, the researcher finds the conclusion of the research. The conclusion of unusual transformation explained below.

There are six sub stages for initiation or transformation stage in hero journey. In the novel Alice in Wonderland, the researcher found the road of the trials, meeting with the goddess, and women as the temptress, atonement with father, apotheosis, and ultimate boon. The road of the trials is the step when the hero must be facing a series of the tests, tasks or ordeals. Meeting with the goddess represents the point in the adventure when the hero meets the goddess. Women as the temptress represent temptation that may land a hero abandon or stray from his or her quest. Atonement with the father is the condition which shows often a man with great authority or incredible power. Apotheosis is representing when the hero gains a deep understanding of him and may be dying. The ultimate boon is the step of the hero where he or she finally achieves the goals in the quest. Thus, all of stages initiation or transformation can be found in the plot of novel. The absence of the stages did not affect the outcome of the hero journey.

5.2. Suggestion

Based on the research finding, some suggestions are offered to the readers. Generally, this research gives the inspiration for the readers to find the highlighted view about Joseph Campbell theory in their life and able to take the valuable lessons in every stage of journey.

1. For students, this research is hoped to give the student to get knowledge and understanding about the novel Alice and Wonderland especially about its relation with the hero journey.
2. For the teachers, it is hoped that this research can be used as a reference in conducting teaching and learning especially about literary work which related to initiation or transformation in hero journey.
3. For further researches who are interested in literary work, hopefully this research can be used as a good reference for them to continue this research, may be with another approach or novel.
4. After all, this research is still far from the perfectness despite perfection did not exist, thus the research suggests to the next researcher that this research may very useful for them to analyze novel more especially in hero journey.