The conclusion will be about what the research has concluded about the research and the suggestion will be about how the researcher gives the opinion and advise to the researcher and to the others researchers in order to make the research as the further learning.

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the research that had been done , the researcher concluded there were women's oppression that caused the women's struggle in the novel "women talking" by Miriam Toews. The oppression that the women in the Molotschna colony were how they did not receive any mutual respect from the Bishop and the elderly that cause they doubt about their existence and degree in the colony. Then, another oppression was how they experienced injustice law that the Bishop made. They had been judged without investigating, they had been made as the animals in the colony were safer than them.

Oppression after oppression they received had causing the through many struggles. The biggest struggle they had to pass through was how they held a meeting to decide what they would do for their safe and peace in life. The meeting must be held secretly so that the Bishop and the elderly would not know. It is not only how hard to attend the meeting secretly but also how to make the decision of the meeting. With all the limitations and all the fears they experienced, leaving the colony which is where they were given life is the only way to be done. That was not the easy thing to do but they did not have any choice to pursuit their dream which is to be alive with peace and to be treated better as human beings.
